"Good" is finite; there is a limited amout of material good, love, friendship	"good" is infinate; there are infinate amounts of both material and non-material goods
community is a closed system ruled by personal relationships and ascriptive heirarchies	People should be free to leave their old communities and seek their fortunes
if my situation is improved, yours is worsened and vice-versa: therefore, don't try to improve your position or you will be punished and others won't like you	We should be free to compete to make improvements and new discoveries to improve our situation.
Value cannot be created by man; it is given by God. God gives us what we have and it cannot be improved upon	Value can be created by man, and man should be free to create value
Wealth is inherent in nature; there are limitations on land and technology; additional hard work will not improve anything	Wealth comes from work; work and thrift science, new technologies create wealth progress is impossible; it will only come at the expense of others	progress is both possible and necessary Individual achievement is punished; contentment with what you have is valued	individual achievement is valued; contentment with what you have is punished.	